So What?

Lynne Tye of keyvalues.com
Quote from Courtland Allen

At some point she just got so excited about everybody working on these online businesses around her. She had never wanted to do a startup before. She didn't want to raise money and have a ton of employees and have to pitch to investors. But there's this cool, new way to do it and I think I could do it and I'm passionate about something.

So she started a company in March 2017. And two years later she was at a point where she came on the Indie Hackers podcast and her company of one person was making something like $400K a year and she was doing work she loved and working her own hours.  Being an indie hacker really changed her life for the better, and it was really cool to say I was a part of that.
